STANDARD THE WORLD NEEDS

High Moral Example Set by Robert Louis Stevenson Well Worth Living Up To.

Robert Louis Stevenson, refusing to take all that was offered him for a poem he did not think his best, writes: "I do not live much to God and honor, but I will not willfully turn my back on both."

In the modest words lies deep the only standard by which a man can hope to satisfy himself with his life. It is a standard the world today sorely needs. We hear of unrest and strife here of it. Why not, with so many men and women trying to live up to a standard set by someone else? If they succeed, there is no happiness in it, for it has no sanction from their own hearts.

The man we count successful in material affairs and expect to find happy is never one who has reached a certain place. But when a man has set a mark for himself in possessions and has kept that mark in view until he reached it, we call him successful. It may have been a $10,000 home; it may have been one million dollars. But it was his own goal.

It is not less true of his inner life. We do not expect much of a man who has no standard for himself of right and wrong. And he cannot claim any right to contentment. If his only moral standard is the law, he gains only the minimum of satisfaction. Stevenson, refusing money which he needed because he thought he had not earned it, is a thousand times more to be envied than the man who takes a hundred or a million dollars he has not earned, because he will punish him—St. Louis Journal.

HORNSILVER IS PLEASED OVER ORLEAN STRIKE

Bigger and richer grows the Orlean mine at Hornsilver, and it is evident that it is destined to develop into one of the biggest gold-silver mines in southern Nevada during the next few months. A message received by The Bonanza on Monday from H. L. King, of Goldfield, secretary-treasurer of the Orleans Hornsilver Mining company, contained the information that the northeast drift on the 700 level had passed through the fault, and had picked up the luster ore-shoot whence a heavy production of high-grade was made from the workings above.

The ore vein has a width of 7 feet and the hanging-wall has not been exposed, so it is a matter of conjecture as to the magnitude of the find. However, the discovery is of great importance to the entire Hornsilver district, as it proves beyond doubt that the shoots will be found to be persistent at great depth.

The fault in the southeast drift was encountered at a distance of 150 feet from the crosscut, and there is a general feeling of optimism prevailing at Goldfield and in all sections of southern Nevada over the good news that comes from Hornsilver. Owners of property have been instilled with new faith regarding the future of the district, and it is freely predicted that a real old-fashioned mining boom will shortly be in the making.

The winze from the 700 level of the Orlean shaft has attained a depth of 40 feet and 5 feet of ore is exposed that shows average values of $26 a ton in gold and silver. Sinking will be continued for an indefinite distance.

Something to Think About

By E. A. WALKER

HUMAN NATURE

THERE is one boast that is pretty nearly universal. You probably never met a man or a woman who, if occasion gave opportunity, would not say with considerable show of pride, "Well, I know human nature."

They mean when they say it that they think they can solve the causes of human action, that they can accurately point out the why and wherefore that influence our relations one with another, our acts and our attitudes.

Frequently these readers of human nature will ascribe a questionable motive for any kind of an act, good, bad or indifferent. They would have you think that the chief force at work in the world is evil, the commanding passion selfishness.

It isn't true. There is a good deal of good in the world.

The great majority of people are animated and influenced by high motives and splendid desires.

The really bad man or woman is the exception.

Human nature as a whole is of a kind that really makes life worth living.

Edith Burritt, the learned blacksmith, wrote down this wisdom: "No human being can come into this world without increasing or diminishing the sum total of human happiness."

After all, the most of our lives and the most of our endeavor are to help in the general scheme of things.

The corner grocer may be cross and early sometimes, but if you only know if he sent a basket filled with things good to eat to the woman down the street whose husband is sick in the hospital, human nature in his case is dominated by good.

And as it is with the grocer so it is with the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker, with the minister and the singer, with everybody.

It is a splendid thing, a helpful thing, to seek the good side of people, to find out their better qualities and encourage them.

There is some bad in the best of us. There is a lot of good in the worst of us.

Human nature is very much like a garden. In it we plant seeds.

Some sprout and grow into splendid flowering plants that give everybody pleasure. Some come up useless weeds.

If we plant kindness and charity and love, the garden will be worth while.

If we plant envy and greed and malice and hatred and jealousy, it will not prove a source of much joy to anybody.

Nobody can plant or tend the garden but you. Nobody can take from you the credit for the flowers and you cannot shift to another the blame for the growths that are worthless.

Try to know the good side of human nature. Try to cultivate it and encourage it.

If a motive is in question, give it the benefit of the doubt and believe it was good until it is proven to be bad.

It says in the book of Genesis that when the Creator considered his work He pronounced that "it was good."

Unless there is a greater power than the Creator it must have remained good.

Anyhow, it is sort of satisfying to believe that God is more powerful than Evil and unless we have to change, let us keep on thinking so.

TOPIARY REVIVES IN ENGLAND

Trees Shaped as Peacocks Are Old Curiosity, and Many Others Are Being Formed.

Travelers on the great highway which leads through Staines by the Belmont church can see two ancient yew trees cunningly trained and clipped to represent peacocks, which stand on either side of the wicket gate.

They are large trees, ages old, and how many years of care and skill with the pruning knife they stand for none can tell. These are, perhaps, the most familiar examples of the topiary art near the metropolis, but in formal gardens of many stately old country houses their like may be seen in abundance. They are accepted as curiosities, survivals of times past when men had more leisure on their hands than today.

The shaping of living trees into birds and beasts of prey, into spirals, pillars, cannon balls, and any other fantasy chosen, still exists as a British industry. In the Royal Kew nurseries, close by Richmond town, is the largest collection of topiary in the world—nearly 8,000 trees, each one of them trimmed to some animal or bird or architectural form. The work has been done in this open studio, and it has required exemplary patience. The trouble about establishing a formal garden in years past has been that you do not live to see it. The next generation may enjoy it; but with forms that take 40 or 50, even in some cases 80, years to bring to maturity, it is only the grandchildren who can hope to witness their full perfection.—London Daily Telegraph.

FLOUR ADVANCES 65 CENTS ON THE BARREL

MEN 34 YEARS OF AGE START GOING SCHOOL

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Bardsey, a little island off the Welsh coast, has been described as the "Island of ignorance," for it is only last recently that men of the age of 34 have begun to go to school. Up to three years ago the inhabitants believed in ghosts and fairies.

Now they are to have the services of a minister of religion and a schoolteacher.

JEFF DAVIS IS TO BE HONORED WITH MONUMENT

(By Associated Press)

FAIRVIEW, Ky., Feb. 14.—Work on the Jefferson Davis monument at his birthplace here will be resumed when the weather conditions permit next spring, according to Major John H. Leathers, Louisville treasurer of the Jefferson Davis Home association. The shaft now stands 176 feet high and the association has every hope and expectation that the monument will be completed in its originally intended height of 251 feet, Major Leathers says.

The custodian of the property has been directed to turn it over to the contractor, who has made preparations to resume work, held on since early in the war, and who will push the construction as rapidly as possible.

The treasury now has $20,000 to spend on the monument. Major Leathers says, and with the Daughters of the Confederacy actively engaged in raising the $20,000 estimated to be necessary to complete the work, plans for dedication of the completed monument to the first president of the confederacy are being formulated slowly.
